“ Today is the start of your birthday month. I miss how you wanted to celebrate the entire month as if every day was your birthday. That was the little boy in you and I loved it. I so wish that we could go back in time. There are so many things I would have said and done differently.

I will make sure you have some flowers on your grave for your birthday.

Love you,

Gail

“ Today I saw some blue jays. Your eyes were that beautiful blue color. I immediately thought of you and hoped it was your way of letting me know that you are still with me. I can only wish that to be true. I wish I knew for sure.

Love,

Gail

“ Nick, the fifth year anniversary of you passing on is approaching quickly. I still tear up when I think of losing you.

Anyway, I am grateful for that plant you gave me years ago. I don't know how an annual can continue to live so long. But it's blooming beautiful purple flowers once again. Thank you for leaving me with something so beautiful to remember you by. Hope you like the flowers I put on your grave yesterday. I was supposed to meet up with your brother today. Somehow, we got the meeting place mixed up. That saddened me because I like talking with him about you. But we will reschedule a visit.

Love you very much and always will,
Gail

“ I went to Gettysburgh last week with Randy and Ryley. Our hotel room overlooked the battleground. What I found very interesting, besides all of the history there, was a cardinal outside of the bedroom window.

I hadn't seen a cardinal in a very long time. Ryley spotted it first and told me about it. That little guy notices everything. Anyway, I took it as a sign that you were with me. At least I hope you were.

We also went to Amish country, which I know you would love. They are far more strict than the Mennonites that I lived near, when I lived in Va. You definitely would have liked the tour that we took of the Amish farmhouse.

Ryley's favorite was our last stop before coming home. That was Hershey's Chocolate World. That was a bigger place than I had thought before. Great place for kids.

Our drive home was a little scary. We had to drive through some bad storms. The sky looked much like it did here when we had the tornado go through Springfield. I found out, once I was home, that a minor tornado had actually touched down in the part of Ct. that we had driven through. My little weatherman, Ryley, had pointed out the funnel clouds. Like I said, he notices everything. And, he loves weather. Science is a big thing wit him, besides sports. I so wish you could have spent time with him once he was old enough to go fishing and all kinds of outdoor things. You two would have both been very happy with each others company. He's such a smart little guy. He's also funny. I know he could have made you laugh many times.

Tomorrow starts the beginning of May. I used to love that month. Now it's a reminder that you were taken from me. I had put some fake flowers on your grave for early spring. But the people who take care of the cemetery removed them. But I will be sure to get you some nice, real ones for Memorial Day.

Love you,
Gail

“ There is finally a flower on that plant you gave me many years ago. For awhile, I thought it was just going to be the green leaves. But it surprised with with that blossom.

I want to thank you for such a beautiful thing to remember you by.

“ Merry Christmas Nick. This one has been especially hard for reasons that both you and I know of. Please let everyone I love, that are no longer here, know that I miss them.

Before we had the big snowstorm I went to your grave two days that week. I wasn't sure when I would be able to see your stone again. It looks like I will be able to do that soon with the rain that is coming overnight and the mild temperatures.

Anyway, I wanted to let you know how much you are missed and loved on this favorite holiday of yours. So, once again, Merry Christmas.

With Much Love always,
Gail

“ This would have been the time of year that you and I would have gone to the Big E. The weather has definitely been nice enough for it so far. Unfortunately, it's been called off this year. However, I wouldn't have gone anyway,. That was a special time that you and I would spend together without any others we knew.

That plant you gave me years ago is still thriving, even though it is supposed to be an annual. It has plenty of greenery. But there haven't been any new flowers on it for awhile. Hoping to see some soon. It always gives me a bit of a lift when I see them blooming.

Missing you as much as ever.
Love you,
Gail

“ I hadn't seen any bluebirds for quite awhile. Then I saw two on the same day. I thought of you right away. I can't go to one of your favorite places right now. They are doing construction near that part of the river. I'm disappointed with that. It usually brings me some sort of peace. Hopefully they will be done there soon.
I'm hoping to be able to put some mums on your grave soon. With the bad storm we had this summer all flowers had to be removed for them to clean up the debris. But not a day goes by that my heart still doesn't break over my loss of you.

With Much Love,
Gail

I'll put some extra flowers on your grave when your birthday is here. I wish I could be buying you presents and getting cake and all the trimmings instead. But this is all that's left that I can do for you now. Until we are together once again, please know that you will forever be in my heart.

I ended up not being able to spend Ryley's 8th birthday with him. I wanted to hug him so badly. It hurt so bad. I miss him and Randy terribly. They have both been all I have since you went away.

“ You and I both loved watching baseball. With what is going on now, I have no idea when the season will begin.

Mostly, I'm feeling bad for both Ryley and Randy about this. You know how my son is such a good athlete. Well, my grandson is taking after him. Ryley was scheduled to be starting this baseball season in an advanced league. Now I don't think he'll be playing any kind of organized sports this spring at all. I will miss not being able to watch him. I so need these kind of things to keep me occupied. Since you've been gone I have relied heavily upon the two of them to fill my life. Hoping this whole thing will end soon.

I did get a call the other night from your brother checking in on me. That was very nice of him. I truly appreciated the call. We spoke of getting together with your other brother to look at pictures. We're just waiting for all this virus stuff to settle down.

Miss you, sweetie. always will.

I only have one joy since you are gone and that's my grandson. Ryley. If it weren't for that little guy, I don't know if I could bear it at all.

Every year that passes, I find myself wishing time away. I want to be with you again. I can't seem to stop myself from doing that. This is my fourth Christmas without you but it seems even longer than that.

Anyway, I hope you are at peace and with all your loved ones that passed on before you.

But the thing I'll miss most tomorrow, are the hugs and kisses you would have given me. Every birthday card you gave me had beautiful sayings. But the words you would at to it made that even better.

Your birthday will be coming up soon. That is always a hard day. The cherished memories of the celebrations we had. It wasn't until the last year or two that you really didn't care much about celebrating. In some ways, you were like a little boy on your birthday. I always got a kick out of that.

“ Tonight a small bird flew into the front of my car. I had hoped he would fly away, but he didn't. I got out of the car to see his little body there lying in the road. I can't tell you how bad I felt. It was kind of like the time you took me fishing and the little fish I caught didn't swim away quickly. I always felt bad about that. And you know that was the last time I ever went fishing again. You knew what you were doing so they weren't going to feel any pain. I didn't.

Nick, it's small things like this that can sometimes bring me to tears. I wish you were here to give me a hug and make me feel better. But I know that's not going to happen. I so wish you could though.

“ I was at my sister's house, for her birthday yesterday. There were 2 fawns and the mother deer that came out of the woods. Right then, a red cardinal flew by me. Moments later, a hummingbird stopped right in front of me and flew off after a bit. I take those as signs that you were visiting me. At least, I hope so.

It's been quite awhile since anything like that has happened. I'm always looking for some kind of sign of you being around. That's because you loved all animals, all nature.

Surprisingly, the deer weren't afraid to come close to where we were sitting in her yard. When she stood up, they got scared and ran back into the woods. But, I remember your cousin saying that when you died, she saw a deer outside her window. She said she knew it was you. So, that's why I so much want to believe that all my visitors yesterday were sent by you. Wishful thinking, I guess. But there has to be more to life than living and dying. There has to be a reason we live and a reason we die.

Anyway, it makes me feel better for at least a little while when I think you are near. I'll never stop loving you, Nick. I should have married you when you asked so many times. I was wrong not to.. But you can't change the past. Just know that I always loved you and always will.

“ I just wanted to light a candle to let you know how much I love and miss you.

Gail Manseau - July 14, 2017 at 02:40 PM

“ Almost every 4th of July you and I spent together. We would barbecue, whether it was at your house or somewhere else. Before you became ill, we would watch the fireworks together, either inside the park, or from the front of your house. That wasn't always on the 4th. But it was a part of it all.

I miss all of those things we used to do together. Mostly I just miss you. I wish there was some way for us to be together. But that's not possible until the day I die.

Hopefully, that won't be too long.

Love,

Gail

I'm so grateful knowing that you are looking over me.

Love you now and forever will.

“ Tonight my little angel, Ryley, graduated from preschool. It was a cute ceremony. I know you would have loved it. Wish you could have been there. But, being in Heaven, maybe you could see him. If you could, I hope you were smiling down on him. He was so happy having both parents there and both grandmothers as well. I haven't seen him this happy in a very long time. I hope you will keep watch over him forever, Nick.
Love you,
Gail

“ Last year, on this day, was the last time I saw your face. When that casket was lowered into the ground my heart went with it. I'm missing you today even more than that day. I went to your grave last night and saw a young widow, whose husband had just been buried, sobbing. When I left, I wanted to cry just as much as she was. The hurt just doesn't go away, Nick. It never will. I will forever be missing and loving you. All my love to you today and always,

“ Today marks a year since you went to Heaven. I just wanted you to have this candle to know that I'm thinking about you.
Love you, Gail

Gail Manseau - May 29, 2017 at 12:20 AM

“ Nick,

Late tomorrow night will be a year since your heart stopped beating. I know they were able to get it beating again after quite a length of time. I also know that the scan they did of your brain at that point showed brain damage. You would have never wanted to be that way. I know that in my head. But my heart still wishes you would have survived.

I know that's selfish, but if it were the other way around you would be wishing it too. Then Sunday morning came and I got the call I dreaded ever getting. I couldn't believe what they were telling me. I can still remember the doctor telling me you had passed away. I was dumbfounded. I didn't want to believe him. I didn't want to believe it was happening. Unfortunately it was. The tears started then and they continue to this day.

I go to the cemetery as often as I can. Sometimes I wish nobody else would go there because when I am there I just want to talk to you.

I bought you some flowers that I hope you like. And hopefully soon your headstone will be placed there. Nick, you will forever be in my heart. Until the day I die, I will always make sure that your place at the cemetery has flowers. If I could plant something, I would. But it's not allowed.

I'll visit your grave again this weekend. Until then, I love you, always will.

“ A week from today will make a year since you left this earth. I'll put flowers on your grave. But the sadness I feel still overwhelms me, Nick. I don't know for sure what awaits us when we die. But I'm hoping and praying that once again you and I will be reunited in the after life.

When you were alive, I took far too much for granted. You tried to tell me you were sick and dying. I didn't want to believe that was happening. So, I always told you to stop talking about it. Now, I wish I had listened to you and spent your last days with you 24/7.

You are an angel in Heaven now. I want you to know that nobody loved you more than I did. I should have told you that more often. You had beautiful ways of showing how much you cared for me. I can only hope that you knew I loved and cared about you as much as you did me.

Love to you, eternally, Nick.

“ Just saying hello. I wish you were here. I miss you very much. I can't even explain to anyone just how I feel. With you gone, life doesn't seem to mean much anymore. Looking forward to the day I can be with you again, Nick.

Love Always,
Gail

Miss you so much.

Miss you terribly. Sending you much love,

Nick,

Little Ryley is having so much trouble adjusting to his mother leaving. Please help him. He's going to be 5 this Easter Sunday. I know you wouldn't like that he cries because of her. If you were still here, for me to talk to, maybe we could think of something to say, or do, to help him. Other than hugging him and letting him know how much both Randy and I love him, I'm truly at a loss. So, please watch over him, Nick.

As always I am missing you. Love you as much as ever.

It's been almost 10 months since you left. But time hasn't changed a thing. I miss you as much now as I did the day you were buried. It's so hard living without you, Nick. I wish I had told you more often how much you were loved by me. I will eternally regret that. But you had to know in the things that I did. Because I knew how you felt by the things you did for me.

Soon the spring weather will be here again. I will be sure to put pretty flowers on your grave. You loved them and you deserve them. I wish there was more that I could do for you. But I can't. Just hope you can hear me every day when I tell you I love and miss you. Sometimes when I look at two of your pictures, that I have in my room, I feel you're trying to tell me something. Sometimes, I think you're just smiling at me now. Other times, I think you don't approve of what I'm thinking. But that's alright. We didn't agree on everything. That made it all the more fun when we disagreed on something. We'd either end up arguing, or laughing. Most of the time it ended up being funny. I miss those times, Nick. I'd give anything for one more day with you. So many things left unsaid. I do cherish the memories of all the years we had together and always will.

Until I see you again, just know I love you,

Gail

“ Nick,
I know tomorrow is Carl's birthday. I wish the two of you had been able to have more presence in each others lives. But, I know how much you loved your son. It's a shame that neither one of you were able to reconcile before you died.
I know every single birthday he had you remembered and it hurt you. Whatever his feelings were then, are his problem, not yours.
I will always love you no matter how many years go by. You are in my thoughts every single day.
With All My Love,
Gail

“ Nick, I never thought that you would be the first one of us to leave this earth. I thought we had so much more time to spend together. How I wish I had said the things I didn't. Please know that I always loved you and will forever. I go to places that I know you loved to go to. But it's not the same without you. I pray every day that you will come to get me and be with you once again. I can only say that I'm happy that you are free from all the pain you endured, I will miss and love you forever,
All My Love,
Gail

“ Nick, the Patriots did it. I know you would have loved to see that game. You also would have liked to laugh at me yelling at the TV. I missed not watching it with you. Love you and miss you so much, sweetie. I always do.

Gail - February 06, 2017 at 10:55 AM

“ Nick the Patriots will be going to the Super Bowl again. I know you'd be happy about this, especially after all the problems Goodell caused. As I watched the play off game, I was reminded of how you would have to calm me down when I went crazy if the other team scored. I miss that .I miss you. Wish we could have watched yet another game together. Love you so much.

“ Nick, it's so hard listening to the Christmas music being played. We spent so many Christmas' together. I never thought that last year would be the last one. I thought we had so many more to share. It just doesn't seem right without you here. I love and miss you. If there was a Christmas wish that would be granted to me, it would be that you were here with me. Wishful thinking on my part. Love you, sweetie.

Gail - December 07, 2016 at 06:20 PM

“ I hope you like the Christmas arrangement I put on your grave. I remember how much you loved the smell of fresh greenery at this time of year. I went by your apartment last night. Tomorrow Sebastian is playing his first football game. Please watch over him so that he doesn't get hurt. I'm so worried about him playing that game with those seizures he has. You and I agreed that he shouldn't be playing. But I don't have any say in it. So please keep him safe. Miss you so much.

I miss you very much.
