“ It was 8 years ago tonight that you left. Your heart stopped beating around 10pm. The EMT's were able to get it started after 15 minutes or so.

As much as I would have loved to have you stay, you knew better. You would have never wanted to have any sort of brain damage. You prided yourself on your intelligence. I don't know anyone that has ever said that you weren't the smartest person they ever knew. Yes, you and I teased each other about that. You always told me that it didn't matter how many degrees I had, social sciences weren't REAL science, according to you. What I wouldn't give to have a day with you again. I miss all of those times. So many memories now. Wish you were here so we could be making more memories. But that's not possible anymore.

I have so many days that for no reason, tears just fall. I know I will never get over losing you. My whole world changed the day you left. I do hope you know what I'm thinking when I visit your grave, or even when I'm just thinking about you.

Love you,

“ Nick,
It wasn't until yesterday that I found out the gift you gave me so many years ago was broken. Ryley went in my room and discovered it. It made me feel so bad. I tried to get it working. It just won't.

One thing that has lasted is the plant you gave me. I thought for sure it was going to die this year when a part of it came off. Instead, it regrew a newer and healthier branch that flowers will come out on. The holidays this year were an especially bad time for me this year. It was the first year in my life that I didn't put a Christmas tree up. Now I know how you felt when you didn't want to be bothered the last year or so of your life.

I am not willing to do so many things anymore. Just looking forward to when I can be with you again.

“ My class reunion is going to be this Sat. night. It was supposed to be last year. But Covid did away with that.

I have mixed feelings about going there. I'll know quite a few people who will show up. I'm just not sure if I really do want to see most of them. I bought the ticket. So, I'll go just because of that.

I would much rather have you be alive and spend a Sat. night with you instead of going there.

It's strange that when it was 25 years ago, I wanted to go to that one. Now it's 25 years later and so many things have changed. Had I known the future, I wouldn't have gone to the 25th at all.

You were right about so many things. You can't go back in time. The only time i would care to go back to is when you were still here.

I miss you so much. I always will.

Love you,

When the day was done, you were already getting everything ready to make soup and other things. I miss that! When Christmas came, you derived a great deal of fun in giving more than getting. I loved that about you. The smell of pine needles and the lights and decorations on the tree made you happy. You always managed to get everyone something nice for Christmas, on a very limited income. I was blessed to have had you in my life. Wish we would have had more time together.*

“ I remember everything about what happened 20 years ago. You were in the hospital with a broken hip. You didn't know anything about what had happened in NY at the World Trade Center. It would take you at least a day to know what had transpired.

I didn't know myself what happened until my sister called me to let me know she was alright. I was watching something on TV and hadn't seen any news until I changed the channel.

My God, Nick, what a terrible event that was. Poor people trapped in that building. I recall being in a daze for awhile. But never once was I afraid to be in this country during that whole time. Even though you were in the hospital, I felt safe as long as you were here with me.

“ I went to Gettysburgh last week with Randy and Ryley. Our hotel room overlooked the battleground. What I found very interesting, besides all of the history there, was a cardinal outside of the bedroom window.

I hadn't seen a cardinal in a very long time.

Ryley spotted it first and told me about it. That little guy notices everything. Anyway, I took it as a sign that you were with me. At least I hope you were.

We also went to Amish country, which I know you would love. They are far more strict than the Mennonites that I lived near, when I lived in Va. You definitely would have liked the tour that we took of the Amish farmhouse.

Ryley's favorite was our last stop before coming home. That was Hershey's Chocolate World. That was a bigger place than I had thought before. Great place for kids.

Our drive home was a little scary. We had to drive through some bad storms. The sky looked much like it did here when we had the tornado go through Springfield. I found out, once I was home, that a minor tornado had actually touched down in the part of Ct. that we had driven through. My little weatherman, Ryley, had pointed out the funnel clouds. Like I said, he notices everything. And, he loves weather. Science is a big thing wit him, besides sports. I so wish you could have spent time with him once he was old enough to go fishing and all kinds of outdoor things. You two would have both been very happy with each others company. He's such a smart little guy. He's also funny. I know he could have made you laugh many times.

Tomorrow starts the beginning of May. I used to love that month. Now it's a reminder that you were taken from me. I had put some fake flowers on your grave for early spring. But the people who take care of the cemetery removed them. But I will be sure to get you some nice, real ones for Memorial Day.

Love you,
Gail

“ You and I both loved watching baseball. With what is going on now, I have no idea when the season will begin.

Mostly, I'm feeling bad for both Ryley and Randy about this. You know how my son is such a good athlete. Well, my grandson is taking after him. Ryley was scheduled to be starting this baseball season in an advanced league. Now I don't think he'll be playing any kind of organized sports this spring at all. I will miss not being able to watch him. I so need these kind of things to keep me occupied. Since you've been gone I have relied heavily upon the two of them to fill my life. Hoping this whole thing will end soon.

I did get a call the other night from your brother checking in on me. That was very nice of him. I truly appreciated the call. We spoke of getting together with your other brother to look at pictures. We're just waiting for all this virus stuff to settle down.

Miss you, sweetie. always will.

Love, Gail

I only have one joy since you are gone and that's my grandson. Ryley. If it weren't for that little guy, I don't know if I could bear it at all.

Your birthday will be coming up soon. That is always a hard day. The cherished memories of the celebrations we had. It wasn't until the last year or two that you really didn't care much about celebrating. In some ways, you were like a little boy on your birthday. I always got a kick out of that.

Some day we will be able to be together again. I don't know when. But when that happens, I will be forever by your side.

“ Tonight a small bird flew into the front of my car. I had hoped he would fly away, but he didn't. I got out of the car to see his little body

“ I was at my sister's house, for her birthday yesterday. There were 2 fawns and the mother deer that came out of the woods. Right then, a red cardinal flew by me. Moments later, a hummingbird stopped right in front of me and flew off after a bit. I take those as signs that you were visiting me. At least, I hope so.

It's been quite awhile since anything like that has happened. I'm always looking for some kind of sign of you being around. That's because you loved all animals, all nature.

Surprisingly, the deer weren't afraid to come close to where we were sitting in her yard. When she stood up, they got scared and ran back into the woods. But, I remember your cousin saying that when you died, she saw a deer outside her window. She said she knew it was you. So, that's why I so much want to believe that all my visitors yesterday were sent by you. Wishful thinking, I guess. But there has to be more to life than living and dying. There has to be a reason we live and a reason we die.

Anyway, it makes me feel better for at least a little while when I think you are near. I'll never stop loving you, Nick. I should have married you when you asked so many times. I was wrong not to.. But you can't change the past. Just know that I always loved you and always will.

“ Nick,

Late tomorrow night will be a year since your heart stopped beating. I know they were able to get it beating again after quite a length of time. I also know that the scan they did of your brain at that point showed brain damage. You would have never wanted to be that way. I know that in my head. But my heart still wishes you would have survived.

I know that's selfish, but if it were the other way around you would be wishing it too.

Then Sunday morning came and I got the call I dreaded ever getting. I couldn't believe what they were telling me. I can still remember the doctor telling me you had passed away. I was dumbfounded. I didn't want to believe him. I didn't want to believe it was happening. Unfortunately it was. The tears started then and they continue to this day.

I go to the cemetery as often as I can. Sometimes I wish nobody else would go there because when I am there I just want to talk to you.

I bought you some flowers that I hope you like. And hopefully soon your headstone will be placed there. Nick, you will forever be in my heart. Until the day I die, I will always make sure that your place at the cemetery has flowers. If I could plant something, I would. But it's not allowed.

I'll visit your grave again this weekend. Until then, I love you, always will.

When you were alive, I took far too much for granted. You tried to tell me you were sick and dying. I didn't want to believe that was happening. So, I always told you to stop talking about it. Now, I wish I had listened to you and spent your last days with you 24/7. You are an angel in Heaven now. I want you to know that nobody loved you more than I did. I should have told you that more often. You had beautiful ways of showing how much you cared for me. I can only hope that you knew I loved and cared about you as much as you did me.

I wish I had told you more often how much you were loved by me. I will eternally regret that. But you had to know in the things that I did. Because I knew how you felt by the things you did for me.

Soon the spring weather will be here again. I will be sure to put pretty flowers on your grave. You loved them and you deserve them. I wish there was more that I could do for you. But I can't. Just hope you can hear me every day when I tell you I love and miss you. Sometimes when I look at two of your pictures, that I have in my room, I feel you're trying to tell me something. Sometimes, I think you're just smiling at me now. Other times, I think you don't approve of what I'm thinking. But that's alright. We didn't agree on everything. That made it all the more fun when we disagreed on something. We'd either end up arguing, or laughing. Most of the time it ended up being funny. I miss those times, Nick. I'd give anything for one more day with you. So many things left unsaid. I do cherish the memories of all the years we had together and always will.

“ Nick,
I know tomorrow is Carl's birthday. I wish the two of you had been able to have more presence in each others lives. But, I know how much you loved your son. It's a shame that neither one of you were able to reconcile before you died.

I know every single birthday he had you remembered and it hurt you. Whatever his feelings were then, are his problem, not yours. I will always love you no matter how many years go by. You are in my thoughts every single day.

*With All My Love,
Gail*

“ Nick, I never thought that you would be the first one of us to leave this earth. I thought we had so much more time to spend together. How I wish I had said the things I didn't.

Please know that I always loved you and will forever. I go to places that I know you loved to go to. But it's not the same without you. I pray every day that you will come to get me and be with you once again. I can only say that I'm happy that you are free from all the pain you endured, I will miss and love you forever, “ Nick, the Patriots did it. I know you would have loved to see that game. You also would have liked to laugh at me yelling at the TV. I missed not watching it with you. Love you and miss you so much, sweetie. I always do.

“ Nick the Patriots will be going to the Super Bowl again. I know you'd be happy about this, especially after all the problems Goodell caused. As I watched the play off game, I was reminded of how you would have to calm me down when I went crazy if the other team scored. I miss that .I miss you. Wish we could have watched yet another game together. Love you so much.

"Grief, I've learned, is really just love. It's all the love you want to give but cannot. All of that unspent love gathers up in the corners of your eyes, the lump in your throat, and in that hollow part of your chest. Grief is just love with no place to go."

“ You are now an angel in Heaven. I hope you have a Merry Christmas with your family and friends that passed on before you. Just know that I will be missing you this year and every year going forward. This year, in particular, I am so sad without you. I will love and miss you eternally, Nick. Someday we will be together again. I don't know when that will be. But when I do get to be with you, I know I will finally be happy again.

“ Nick, it's so hard listening to the Christmas music being played. We spent so many Christmas' together. I never thought that last year would be the last one. I thought we had so many more to share. It just doesn't seem right without you here. I love and miss you. If there was a Christmas wish that would be granted to me, it would be that you were here with me. Wishful thinking on my part. Love you, sweetie.

“ I hope you like the Christmas arrangement I put on your grave. I remember how much you loved the smell of fresh greenery at this time of year. I went by your apartment last night. It's odd to see that someone else is living there now. It's actually very sad. I miss you so much, it hurts. Love you, sweetheart, always will.

“ Nick,
Tomorrow Sebastian is playing his first football game. Please watch over him so that he doesn't get hurt. I'm so worried about him playing that game with those seizures he has. You and I agreed that he shouldn't be playing. But I don't have any say in it. So please keep him safe. Miss you so much.
